Happy New Year! As the University of California snow laboratory touts, the western slope of the Sierras has some of the largest snowfalls in North America and I believe them.

We will begin working on a briefing paper and coordinate it with TPE and TPM. Recently, Robin developed a very nice briefing already and we will use that as a starting point.

Happy New Year, Ray! Did you get out from under eight feet of snow?

A favor, please: when you forward the briefing paper to Headquarters, would you please copy Sherry Riklin (you know that Susan Borinsky retired), Liz Zelasko, and me.

The Administrator would like the book on Honolulu closed by the middle of this month. Liz is and has been working diligently on every aspect of the process and I have enlisted every Headquarters environmental specialist, if needed, to achieve that objective. Please provide all the assistance you can.

At least two weeks ago I returned the ARRA environmental specialist announcement to HR and advised that it was ready for publication; the announcement has yet to be published. A new year; the same old hat.

Thanks. Carl
